Student Teacher Special Offer Bank of England Conference for £30

We have the AMAZING opportunity for student teachers, who are EBEA members, to attend the Bank of England conference for the low rate of £30. The one-day conference considers the current stance of UK economic policies and the outlook for the economy, including businesses. You will be given up to date economic and business information and the sessions will provide perspectives on the nature of current economic problems, the policy responses available and the implications for the teaching of Economics and Business Studies. The keynote speakers are Ian McCafferty from the Monetary Policy Committee, Nigel Miller from the Department of Business, Innovation and Skills and Professor Iain Begg from the London School of Economics.

The interactive workshop will offer an insight into the changes at A level. The workshop will include a summary of current draft proposals and consider the implications for teaching of the key changes being introduced. Delegates will also be invited to share their thoughts on how the changes are being addressed and to raise any issues and concerns that the EBEA might be able to assist with or pursue with awarding bodies and Ofqual. For information and to book the event please visit the website.
