

e-Newsletter

SUMMER 2014, ISSUE 3

Don't forget to book
the Bank of England Conference
- Places are going
FAST!

Keeping you regularly up to date

Webinar – Wednesday 2nd July 4.30-5.30pm
Adrian Lyons - HMI, National Lead for Economics, Business and Enterprise.

We are offering members a free webinar titled 'Economics and Business Education - Good, but could be better?'

To attend the webinar online, you will need to initially register your interest by emailing Claire at office@ebea.org.uk Unique login details will be sent to you nearer the time. Places are limited so register your interest now.

Do your students want their say on Europe's recent economic crisis?

AEEE are surveying students from across Europe on their views and they need your help to make sure UK students' views are represented.

The Association of European Economics Education (AEEE) (www.economicseducation.eu) is conducting a survey of 17-19 year old student views of the recent Economic Crisis. They are interested in the views of a range of students including: Business Education, Social Studies, Political Economy, as well as other subjects. The survey can be found by clicking here.

The aim is to find out how students in different countries perceive: "what the crisis is", "what has caused it", "what are its effects", and "how can it be solved".

The findings will be published later in the year on the AEEE website.

If you need further information please contact Steve Hurd s.j.hurd@btinternet.com

Bank of England Conference, 1st July 2014

After generous support from the Bank of England we are able to offer exceptional conference rates. You can't afford to miss it!

The conference is now available at £50 for members and £115 for non-members (including part year membership). The one-day conference considers the current stance of UK economic policies and the outlook for the economy, including businesses. The keynote speakers are from the Monetary Policy Committee, the Department of Business, Innovation and Skills and the London School of Economics.

The sessions will provide perspectives on the nature of current economic problems, the policy responses available and the implications for the teaching of Economics and Business Studies. For information and to book the event please visit the website.

